DiscussIT Topic 6: Where is our country headed?

Discuss IT Topic: Over the last week, our country has had growing concerns on immigration bans, border safety, and executive orders that remind us of issues that have been plaguing our country for years. Now that Trump has been elected President, there has been people threatening to blow up the White House, human right protests, and a plethora of other sensitive subject matters that are very compelling to individual groups of people. Why have these issues come up now as we head into a time in which it seems no one is going to be happy with the outcomes? Will this create a split in this country and place citizens against one another when it comes to their views? In your opinion, what other topics are at the forefront of concern? Explain...

Response: Please make sure all grammar, spelling, indentation, and punctuation is correct.

These issues have come up now as we head into a time in which it seems no one is going to be happy with the outcomes because no other president has been handling these situations which as much force as Donald Trump has. My problem is that he seems to be going towards the entire thing wrong, at least in my opinion. The people of America like to be heard and respected, but the problem is that not everyone is left or right sided. With Donald Trump, he's facing every single problem he comes across completely right sided and doesn't entirely care about the opinions of the American people. The American people have certain expectations to live up to, such as being the land of the free, and which Donald Trump closing borders and telling people you can't do this or that and even firing a woman who disagreed with his views, it makes you wonder if what he's doing is entirely the right choice. However, I accept he is our president and he will have my support for as long as he is. I won't agree with his decisions, and I won't entirely like his person, but the fact of the matter is that the people of America have not had a leader like him in a very, very long time. In fact, most people don't even know how to take it. Whether this change is good or bad, we can't be sure of until later.

I don't believe this will create a split in the country and place citizens against one another when it comes to their views. Yes, some people will argue over it, it's completely natural and it happens all the time. The arguments are what the media always covers so that's what will seem is always happening. My sister has an insane theory actually, that he's being used to bring the country together after being divided for so long. It's kind of the whole deal of a bunch of people coming together to fight one "big bad evil" if you will. In fact, even people who voted for him are starting to rethink their vote. When they voted for him, they didn't think he would do things to the extent of how he's doing them now. Other topics that are at the forefront of the concern are the enemies that he's creating with partner countries. The other countries that have more weapons and a lot more money than America. The countries that have more resources and a better military than us. To put it in short, Trump is making some really bad decisions. He's bullying the bigger kids who are stronger and scarier than he is. The problem is, that when the bigger kids start to defend, he'll either make bad decisions or lead our country in the wrong direction. That's my fear in the end, that when it really comes time to actually do something, he'll be all bark and no bite.
